

O, hear the people's voices!

November 13, 2011

In the United States, November brings many an election and Thanksgiving. A month later the world will celebrate Christmas. How each one chooses to vote and celebrate is left up to each.

The Christian bible notes that David slew Goliath with a stone drawn from a bag and slung it upon the forehead of the giant. [I. Samuel 17:49]. However, the story did not end there, for when David slew the giant he did so without a sword in his hand and there was lack of belief. An action of belief was required, so David withdrew the giants own sword and beheaded the giant and then there was belief.

Statistics show the majority of the world believes in a creator.

Herein today's modern financial world we have a grave paradox, the people have cast the stone against evil which has struck with deadly force. The people can only look at elected leaders, financial leaders and others in disbelief as they by their own choice have not accepted the stone has already been cast against evil.

Those elected leaders, financial leaders and others that have not yet accepted the giant has been fatally struck are attempting to devise plans to save the giant. These implementers of false illusions will soon be facing a casting of a second stone.

All the false gold in the world will not buy the votes of the people and until the elected leaders cast their own stones against evil and accept the giant has been fatally struck, they them self may face potential destruction of their political career.
