Amazing, all those old grey hairs have forgotten the young will inherit.

For God said the meek shall inherit.

We condemn our own soul to hell by action or inaction.

It is not God that chooses who reaches heaven, lest be the fooled.

The grey hairs can try to do things the old way, but today's society will prove otherwise. The policy leaders are more acting to protect their servitude game which the young want no part of, so you can throw the old process of thinking out the window for the old will only be around another decade or two and the children will be around many decades.

The policy leaders of the world have already taken all luxury money from them so all that is left is survival money. The grey haired policy leaders appear to be hoping that throwing of stones will defeat the rise of billions.

The grey hairs need to realize the young have read many more books that what the grey hairs wanted them too. The policy makers wanted high speed communication for stripping the wealth from the people which they did but forgot the balance of the scale, the people also used the high speed communications to learn that evil rules and must fall. Do they think the wars not happening in other countries is not related in some manner? The grey hairs need to wake up for that is what I see.

The young care not about money, they care about freedom.
